

Josh Adler is an organization builder with over 20 years of experience across the business, education and non-profit sectors.

He began his career as a technology entrepreneur and built a market-leading software business that was later acquired. He then shifted to the world of education and joined African Leadership Academy to lead their entrepreneurship work. Over the past decade his team has designed a variety of new approaches, produced research and influenced policy for improved outcomes in youth transitions from education to entrepreneurship - most notably through the Anzisha Prize, a pan-African partnership with Mastercard Foundation.

Josh serves as a global advisor to the Moleskine Foundation (Italy) and sits on the board of the Children's Radio Foundation (South Africa).

He holds a degree in Computer Science from the University of the Witwatersrand, South Africa and an MBA from the University of Geneva, Switzerland.