

David Pilling, Africa editor, Financial Times

David Pilling is the Africa editor of the Financial Times. He was previously Asia editor and also formerly Tokyo Bureau Chief for the Financial Times from January 2002 to August 2008. His column ranges over business, investment, politics and economics.

He joined the Financial Times in 1990. He has worked in London as an editor, in Chile and Argentina as a correspondent and covered the global pharmaceutical and biotechnology industry.